

James Babcock, owner and chief executive officer of Collaborative Aggregates LLC is pleased to announce the promotion of Dr. Jason “Jay” Bianchini to the position of chief operating officer

Jay Bianchini, Ph.D,
chief operating officer

James Babcock,
chief executive officer

Jay started with Collaborative Aggregates LLC in an operational role during the formative stages of the company alongside James Babcock in early 2015. During 2017, Jay became vice president of operations during a transformative period for the company.

“Naming Jay as our COO corresponds to the expanding role that he is playing for the organization” explains James. “I rely on Jay for the day-to-day operation of the business, and, as such, this promotion fits the reality of Jay’s role in our organization.” James Babcock is a team member at Cthulhu Ventures LLC, a closely-held investment firm, which has made Collaborative Aggregates an anchor investment, in addition to his chief executive role with Collaborative Aggregates.

James Babcock founded Collaborative Aggregates LLC to commercialize the chemical products formulated by Dr. John Warner and his staff at the Warner Babcock Institute for Green Chemistry that are applicable to the construction materials space, a central Cthulhu Ventures business. Dr. Jay Bianchini was a staff scientist with Warner Babcock prior to him joining with James in 2015. Jay is directing the national product launch of the liquid, plant-based, Delta S technology as an asphalt rejuvenator and warm mix asphalt chemistry.